"There is a radical difference in methods involved in marketing passenger and commercial vehicles," said W. L. Day, vice-president of the General Motors Truck Company, who was in town yesterday and visited the motor truck show. "The motor truck from a distribution standpoint must be regarded pastly as a self-propelled wagon and perhaps even more as a piece of matchinery that has to be sold in the same way as a steam engine, a machine tool or any other time, labor or money saving equipment.

"This condition has given rise to new methods and a new order in the retail end of the motor truck laws."
